Recruitment of a Professor, Assistant and Associate Professor at the University of Turku,
Faculty of Education
- Qualification Requirements, Instructions for Applying and Recruitment Process

For the post of Professor, a researcher of high international standard is sought. Tenure track –positions are meant for researchers who are past the postdoc phase. When selecting a person for the Assistant Professor phase, especially academic potential and ability and motivation for an academic career are taken into consideration. The tenure track Associate Professor phase is intended for a high-level researcher, who should already have significant scientific merits and clear potential for the professor's position. The title (Professor, Associate Professor or Assistant Professor) and more detailed content of the position will be defined later according to the merits and the scientific career of the selected candidate.

Qualification Requirements

A person selected for the post of professor must possess a doctoral degree, high level scientific proficiency, experience in the management of scientific research, evidence of international cooperation in his/her field of study, the ability to provide high-quality research-based teaching, and to supervise dissertations.

When assessing an applicant's merits, scientific publications and other research outcomes of scientific value, teaching experience and pedagogical training, ability to produce study materials, other teaching merits and a teaching demonstration as well as participation in doctoral education will be taken into account. In addition, the applicant's active participation in the academic community, practical expertise in the field in question, if needed, success in obtaining external research funding, academic work abroad and international duties will also be taken into account.

A person selected for the post of assistant or associate professor must possess an appropriate doctoral degree, ability to conduct independent scientific work and experience in management of scientific research. In addition, the person must have evidence of international co-operation in their field of study, and the ability to provide high-quality teaching based on research and to supervise theses and dissertations. When assessing the merits of the applicants, special emphasis will be put on academic potential and quality. Closer instructions on assessment criteria are given in the Rector's decision on the Tenure Track career path system.

A prerequisite for the post of Assistant Professor / Associate Professor / Professor is leadership experience, or a willingness to participate in leadership training commensurate with the post.

More information: Instructions for submitting a job application

The applicant must provide an email address through which they can be reached during the recruitment process.

Recruitment Process

The impartial preparation group appointed by the Dean takes care of practical arrangements related to the recruitment process and can use external experts.

Interviews may be used at various stages of the recruitment process.

Written statements on the scientific qualifications and merits of the applicants who have made it to the next round in the pre-selection carried out by the preparation group will be requested from at least two impartial experts from outside the University of Turku.

The best candidates may be given the opportunity to give a scientific presentation of their research and a teaching demonstration. The teaching demonstration is public and it is assessed. The best ranked applicants may also be interviewed.

The preparation group makes a reasoned proposal for the Faculty Council on which of the candidates should be considered for the post and whether the post should be filled as a Professor or an Associate or Assistant Professor.

The Faculty Council makes a reasoned proposal for the appointment. The faculty submits the proposal (employment contract) and its attachments to the Rector for decision. Candidates are informed of the recruitment process as it progresses, and once the recruitment process has been completed, they are informed of who has been appointed for the position.

The University of Turku reserves the right, for a justified reason, to leave the post unfilled, or to recruit more than one applicant or extend the application period.
